

What is the difference between QTX and QTX2 files?

QTX is a proprietary format used for the exchange of color related information for standard and batches. QTX2 is also a proprietary format from Datacolor that is used to exchange not only color related information from collections, standard and batches but also includes image data to support of SpectraVision technology.

Author: Datacolor

Saved From: <http://knowledgebase.datacolor.com/article-692.html>